The Southwest Institute for Research on Women (SIROW) was founded in 1979 as a regional research and resource institute in the University of Arizona’s College of Social and Behavioral Sciences. SIROW is dedicated to improving the well-being of women and girls, their families, and the communities in which they live.

It is SIROW’s belief that SIROW and its partners can make positive social changes at individual, familial, community, and structural levels by...

- challenging the status quo,
- facilitating the voices of those who experience disparity,
- working with diverse groups of all gender identities and expressions, and
- seeking innovative methods based on research, best practices, and theory to improve conditions and contexts.

SIROW faculty, staff, and students work locally, nationally, and globally to effect positive social change. SIROW’s partners in these efforts include University of Arizona colleges and departments, other institutions of higher education, schools, Native American tribes and communities, governmental agencies, community-based organizations, and community members.

Taking a holistic approach to well-being, SIROW’s interdisciplinary and intersectional community-based research and action projects focus on addressing correlated and co-occurring social and public health issues in the areas of...

- health and wellness (e.g., relationship and sexual health, substance misuse, mental health, and homelessness),
- legal issues (e.g., juvenile justice, legal advocacy, domestic violence, and immigration),
- education and employment (e.g., literacy, leadership, access, and workforce development), and
- women’s history and the arts (e.g., representation of women, diversity of voices, and oral history).

SIROW’s work is guided by its values of respect, collaboration, strength-based approaches, appreciation of diversity, investment in community, and passion for a more equitable world. Based on these values, SIROW shares its unique expertise in...

- research methodology,
- program design, implementation, and program evaluation,
- collaborative partnerships to increase community capacity, infrastructure, and advocacy, and
- training, technical assistance, and workforce development.

Through these efforts, SIROW strives to contribute to a more just and equitable society for all.
